Multiple pathways

1. Dative experiencer > nominative subject

OE me licað > ModE I like

2. Addition of formal subject

OE me egleþ > ModE it ails me

3. Use of participle or adjective

OE me sceamað > ModE I am ashamed

4. Loss of the verb

OE me lyst

“a notable tendency in previous studies of impersonal constructions is that Old English has always received much more attention than Middle English”

Miura (2015: 16)

“The fourteenth and fifteenth centuries may, with regard to English syntax, be called a period of confusion [...] the language was in an unsettled state [...] mistakes were occasionally made”

Middle English Dictionary

Secure <https://quod.lib.umich.edu/m/med/>

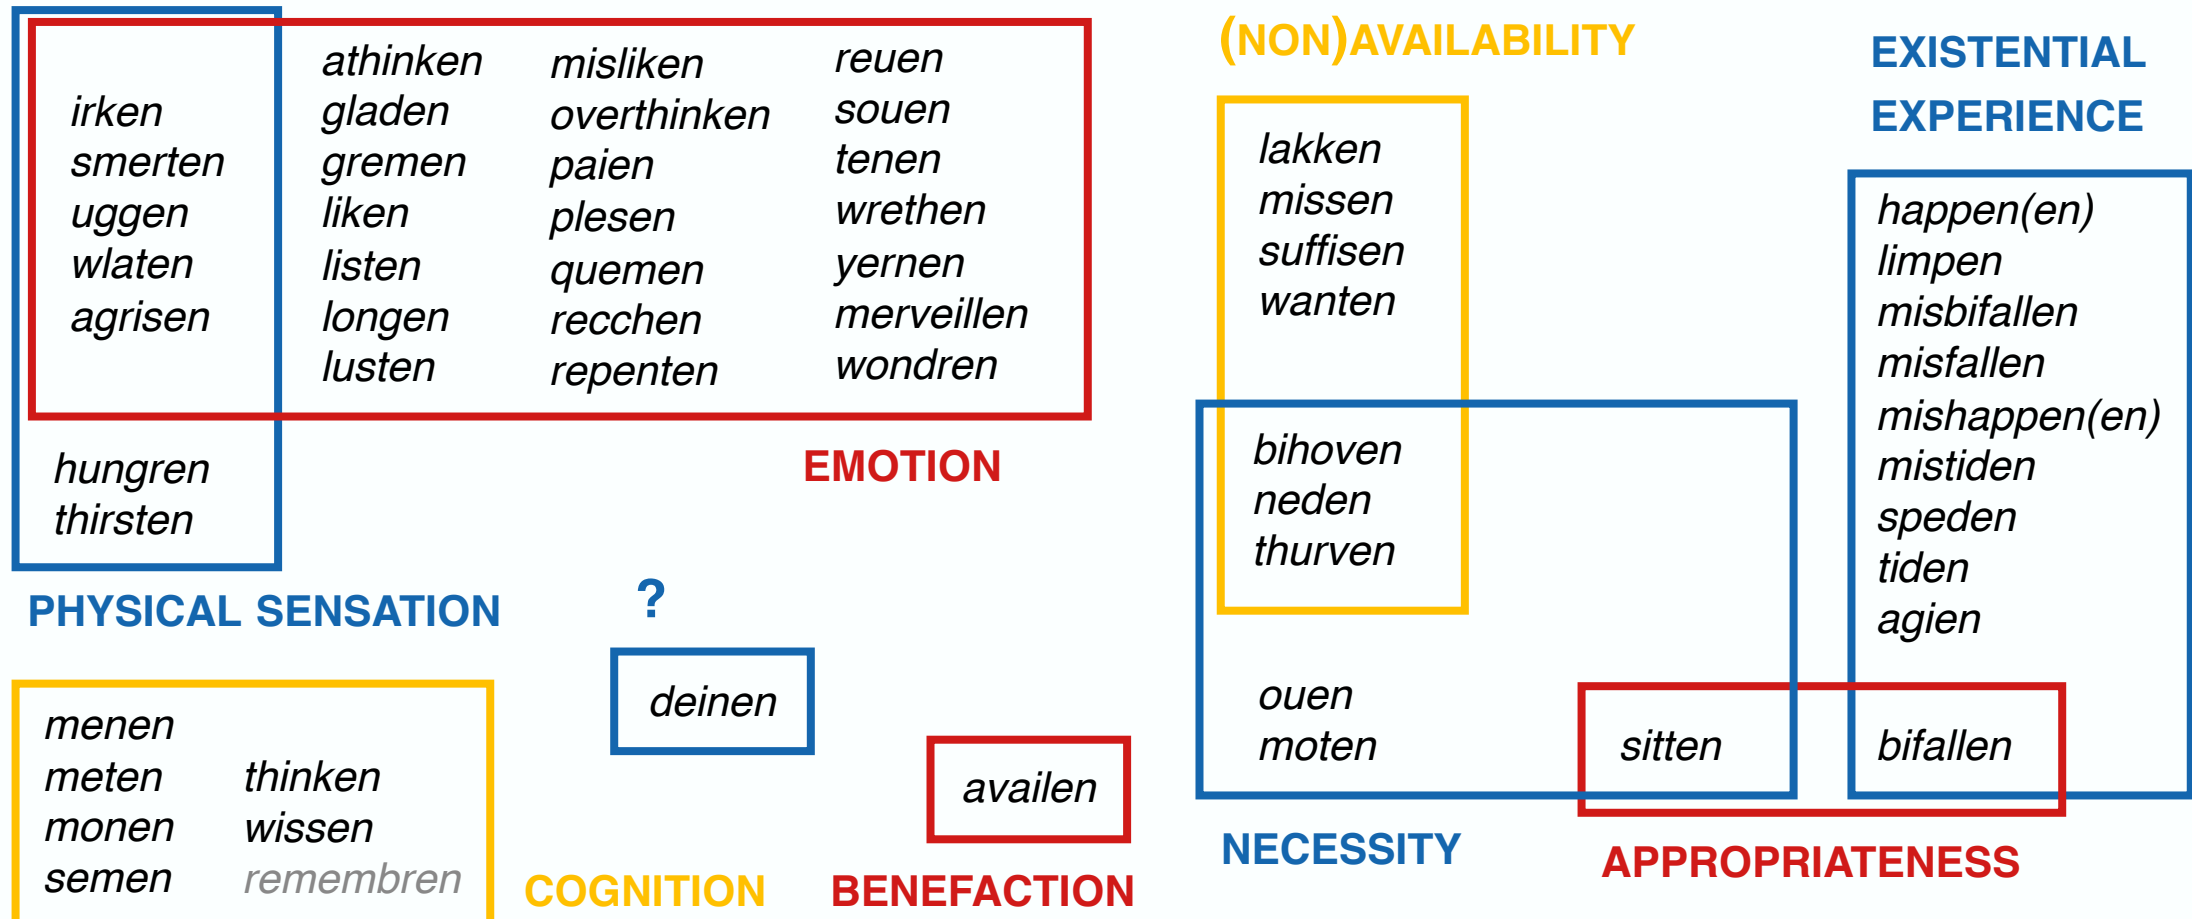

Welcome to the electronic Middle English Dictionary. The print MED, completed in 2001, has been described as "the greatest achievement in medieval scholarship in America." Its 15,000 pages offer a comprehensive analysis of lexicon and usage for the period 1100-1500, based on the analysis of a collection of over three million citation slips, the largest collection of this kind available. This electronic version of the MED preserves all the details of the print MED, but goes far beyond this, by converting its contents into an enormous database, searchable in ways impossible within any print dictionary. (For help on the available searches, click here.)

Lookups: look for a word as a head word or part of a form section (headword and variant forms).

Search the MED entries: look for words, phrases and other features, such as parts of MED stencils, in designated parts of the entries.

Search the MED quotations: look for quotations including specified words and phrases and/or restrict your search to quotations from a particular work or date.

Summary

1. New impersonal types in Middle English: NECESSITY and deinen
2. NECESSITY connected to NONAVAILABILITY and APPROPRIATENESS
3. Onishi's (2001) and Möhlig-Falke's (2012) categories do not correspond one-to-one
4. Middle English has type IV 'happenings' without types IIa 'perception' and IIIa 'volition' (pace Onishi 2001)
5. Middle English 'happening' type more restricted than Icelandic?
Partly a result of reduced ME case system?

CorpusSearch 2: a tool for linguistic research

CorpusSearch 2 is a Java program that supports research in corpus linguistics. It is useful both for the construction of syntactically annotated (parsed) corpora and for searching them. Running CorpusSearch on an appropriately annotated corpus a user can automatically:

- find and count lexical and syntactic configurations of any complexity
- correct systematic errors
- code the linguistic features of corpus sentences for later statistical analysis

CorpusSearch 2

Both the input and output files of CorpusSearch are ordinary text files, with syntactic annotations in the Penn-Treebank format.

CorpusSearch 2 runs under any Java-supported operating system, including Linux, Macintosh, Unix and Windows. It requires Java 2, version 1.3 or later. In addition to being downloadable from this site, CorpusSearch is distributed with the Penn-Helsinki Parsed Corpora of Historical English.
